GEORGE BROWN COLLEGE

VOL. 8 NO. 3 NOVEMBER 1990

HAPPY ANNIVERSARY - Minister of Colleges and Universities Richard Allen chats with students from the Computer Numerical Control Program for Immigrant Women, which is offered co-operatively by the College and the C.A.N.A.C.T. Skills Development Centre, at the fifth anniversary celebration for the Community Outreach Department in mid-November. In a speech to more than 250 staff and guests at Casa Loma, Allen said education was a "central preoccupation" of the NDP government.

Academic standards, more funding on NDP's new agenda for colleges

Ontario colleges need more money, and common academic standards, according to the new Minister of Colleges and Universities.

They have been languishing in a "trough of underfunding" and neglect under previous governments, says Richard Allen, a New Democratic Party member from Hamilton.

While the current recession and provincial deficit of $700 million will prevent the provincial government from increasing funding this year, it intends to do so in future years, he says.

While most Ministry plans remain vague, Allen says he wants to see a Council of Evaluation and Standards established to ensure students can carry their credits between colleges or to universities for advanced standing.

A council of this type was one recommendation of the Vision 2000 report issued earlier this year.

In a speech at Casa Loma in mid-November, Allen said his government is concerned with educational accessibility, particularly for adult and part-time learners.

"We have to provide people...with the tools for learning."

Access and quality of education are on his personal agenda, he said.

Academic staff, students vote for Board reps Dec. 6

Two teachers and three students are running for seats on the Board of Governors. Academic staff and students will choose their representatives in a vote on Dec. 6. Statements by the candidates are on pages 4 and 5 of this issue.

An interview with our new Minister

In late September, Richard Allen, a former McMaster University history professor, was named Minister of Colleges and Universities and Minister of Skills Development. He has held a seat as an NDP member of the legislature from Hamilton since 1982. He visited George Brown's Casa Loma Campus in mid-November to speak at the fifth anniversary celebration of the Community Outreach Department. After speaking, Allen gave City College News a short interview.

CCN: You sat in opposition as colleges and universities critic...what was your view of the way college issues were being handled by the governments of the day?

Allen: My chief impression was they didn't seem to be hugely interested. I mean elementary and secondary schools, and early childhood education, which is important, seemed to get a lot of attention, but college questions were never much to the forefront; universities more so, but the colleges seemed to be the neglected sister in the system. I couldn't understand why that was because there were obviously huge numbers of people in Ontario that were taking courses in the colleges in one way or another. So even in terms of numbers alone they should have been seen as a high priority issue for the government.

CCN: Your ministry is sitting on a large stack of reports - Vision 2000, the Gandz Report - that urge widespread changes to the way colleges do business in Ontario. Is your ministry preparing to move on some of these. I know that we're anxious about certain issues for instance college governance and collective bargaining that the Gandz Report addressed.

Allen: I'm waiting till the end of the year for the submissions from all the colleges to come back in terms of Continued on page 6.

Our crisis brings out the best in us

This fall, George Brown's community faced a crisis of larger proportions than we have seen for many years. Overnight, hundreds of students and staff found themselves without a place to study or work when our 1 Dartnell building was closed because of asbestos contamination shortly after the start of the fall semester.

To be frank, this crisis resulted in its fair share of uncertainty and frustration, particularly during the early weeks. But it did something else as well. It showed how cohesive and co-operative we can be when facing a difficult situation together.

From the outset, our goal was to continue classes as normally as possible for as many students as possible. In some cases this meant juggling schedules and using space at our own campuses. In others, it meant a city-wide search for specialized training facilities that could be leased.

With the co-operation of our staff and students, we succeeded in minimizing disruption of the educational process. Apart from continuing education courses, which were cancelled, and one group of apprentices who had their program start postponed, our programs continued.

We know that continuing classes and work in new locations caused some difficulties for many of our staff and students: extra travel time, adjustment to new equipment and facilities, and changes in schedules and course contents.

Despite these challenges, George Brown staff and students have displayed both flexibility and understanding over the past two months. This unwelcome crisis, now thankfully over, has brought out some of the best in us.

Buttons, discussions will mark the Montreal student massacre

One year after the terrible tragedy, George Brown College will remember.

The massacre of 14 female engineering students at the University of Montreal by a single gunman on Dec.

6, 1989, is being recalled at events around the College. The first anniversary of the event is also being used to focus attention on continuing violence against women in our society.

"The objective is to make people aware of the violence that's occurring in the lives of women every single day," says Assaulted Women's and Children's Counsellor/Advocate program Coordinator Sandra Fishleigh, who helped organize the Dec. 6 events.

"The massacre of the women in Montreal is one example of the horror that's happening all the time."

Buttons bearing the blunt message, "Stop Violence Against Women" will be distributed to staff and students at all four campuses on the morning of Dec. 6.

A memorial program called Speak Out will be held at Nightingale Campus on Dec. 6 in which both staff and students will speak about violence against women and listen to music by a group called Women of Courage.

The College's Advisory Committee for Equity will kick off a College-wide sexual harassment awareness campaign with two information sessions about sexual harassment and violence against women a day earlier, on Dec.

5. The hour-long sessions at Casa Loma, which start at 11 a.m., include presentations by staff, a video, and discussion period.

The speakers at the Casa Loma event are Sandra Fishleigh and Community Services teacher Ron Sluser, who is a member of the Toronto Men Against Violence Against Women Committee.

All students and staff are invited to take part in the programs at both campuses.

The Nightingale program, which, along with the button distribution, is sponsored by the Women's Safety Committee and staff and students of the Assaulted Women's and Children's Counsellor/Advocate program, will be held in Nightingale's Room B2 from noon to 1 p.m.

The Dec. 5 Casa Loma information sessions, which have been organized by the Harassment and Discrimination Subcommittee of the Advisory Committee for Equity (formerly called the Affirmative Action Advisory Committee), will be held in the auditorium of 160 Kendal Ave. starting at 11 a.m. and noon.

Creating entrepreneurs is international issue

If we have an Honest Ed, why not an Honest Tom, Dick or Harriet?

This is the problem vexing educators from around the world who are trying to develop programs that create entrepreneurs such as Toronto's own Ed Mirvish.

They are attempting to distill and package the creativity and drive that allows some people to discover and exploit the opportunities around them.

Taming the wild wheeling and dealing of the business world for the calmer climate of the classroom poses some problems, says Dr. Hena Mukherjee, an international expert on entrepreneurial education working for the Education Division of the Commonwealth Secretariat. She visited George Brown recently as a guest of the International Centre.

"Trying to find a marriage (between entrepreneurship and education) has been very difficult."

The number of people who persist in businesses of their own after taking an entrepreneurial program can be as low as 20 per cent, she says.

"What are the elements that keep young people in business; that's our next stage," says Mukherjee.

She also met with George Brown Community Business Centre Director David Pell, who is also Director of the Commonwealth Association for Local Action and Economic Development.

1 Dartnell open after passing asbestos test

Classes started again last week in Casa Loma's 1 Dartnell building after a two-month asbestos clean-up.

Air quality tests taken on Nov. 12 found that all three floors of the building met the College's standard for air-borne asbestos fibres.

A similar test in mid-October found that the second floor – where a large amount of asbestos was used to insulate the welding labs – had unacceptable levels of asbestos.

The College's joint labour/management Health and Safety Committee, which recommended the building be reopened after looking at the Nov. 12 test results, has ordered further air tests be taken in late November, and monthly for a period of time to ensure the air continues to meet the standards adopted by the College.

The building was closed on Sept. 12 after an air test found elevated levels of asbestos fibres on the first and second floors of the building following construction work over the summer.

Hundreds of full-time students, primarily in technology and apprenticeship programs, continued classes in vacant space at Casa Loma and St. James campuses as well as at several leased facilities off campus.

Those students and staff will now return to 1 Dartnell over the next few weeks and try to catch up on missed classes – particularly those using specialized equipment found in welding, millwright and ceramics labs at 1 Dartnell.

The building clean-up, which saw as many as 30 people working long days and some weekends, involved removing some asbestos, sealing other areas containing the substance, and thoroughly cleaning the building, including the inside of the ventilation system.

The clean-up and associated costs are expected to amount to more than $800,000.

Much of the cost of the clean-up will be met by a special grant from the Ministry of Colleges and Universities.

New construction on the third floor of the building will house the Academic Skills Department of the Access and Program Development Division.

Two elected to College Council

Only one or two votes separated the winners from the losers in College Council elections held Oct. 26.

Academic staff in the School of Business and Graphic Arts Division cast 16 votes for printing teacher Bill Kidd and 15 for business teacher Lillian MacGregor.

Support staff in Computer Services, the Registrar's Office, Student Services, Learning Resources, Community Outreach, and the Business and Industry Training Division gave Community Outreach consultant Yvonne Anderson 26 votes and Registration Systems Co-ordinator Rachele Rossi 24 votes.

Kidd and Anderson will sit on the Council until August, 1992.

College Council, which is chaired by Hospitality Chairperson Brian Cooper, now has a full membership with 24 people representing all parts of the College.

The council's mandate is to develop and propose to the president program and curriculum goals and standards, teaching methodologies and standards; policies regarding grading, promotion, student appeals, standards of student conduct and discipline and student awards.

Two more French colleges are urged

The Ministry of Colleges and Universities is considering establishing new French colleges in the north and central/southwestern regions of Ontario. It is looking at a report advising that the colleges begin operation by September, 1992.

Ontario's first all-French community college, La Cité Collegial, opened this fall in Gloucester, Ontario, near Ottawa.

BOARD OF GOVERNORS ELECTION DECEMBER 6, 1990

Academic Staff Candidates

Voting Procedures

Polling Stations: Polling stations will be open on Thursday, Dec. 6, 1990, from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. at all campuses. Students and staff vote at the same polling station at their home campus. All full-time and part-time students and all academic staff employed by the college on the day of the election are eligible to vote. Polling stations will be established at the following locations:

Casa Loma: Staff lounge at 160 Kendal Ave.
Kensington: Outside the campus manager's office, main floor, 21 Nassau St., Building One.
Nightingale: Campus Manager's Office, Room 114.
St. James: Outside the cafeteria, 200 King St. E.

Advance Polls: Advanced polls will be held on Mon., Dec. 3, 1990, from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. for those unable to cast their ballots on voting day. The advance polls will be taken in the same locations as the regular voting at Casa Loma, Kensington, and Nightingale campuses. At St. James, the advance poll will be held in the campus manager's office, Room 275 of 200 King St. E.

Voting Procedures: The voting procedures for both staff and students are as follows:

1. Voter's name must be on the list prepared in advance.
2. To obtain a ballot, voters must sign beside their names on the list.
3. The ballot must be initialed by the college-designated returning officer before being marked or deposited in the ballot box by the voter.
4. Voters must deposit their own ballots in the ballot box.

Segregated votes: Staff members or students are to vote at the campus where they normally work or study. If voters cannot vote at this campus, they are permitted to cast ballots at another campus. Their names will be added to a separate list and their ballots will be segregated. When ballots are counted, the segregated ballots will be added to those of the appropriate campus after it is determined that the voter was eligible to vote according to the campus voters' list.

Counting of ballots: After the close of polls at 7 p.m. on Dec. 6, 1990, the sealed ballot boxes and segregated ballots will be transported to the boardroom of 500 MacPherson, where the ballots will be counted and the winners declared. Candidates or their representatives may be present at the counting as witnesses, but they may not take part in the counting.

Board of Governors Elections Committee.*

Miro C. Klement
14 years teaching
School of Science and Technology

During the 14 years I have been teaching at George Brown College, I have done my share of complaining about the remoteness of the administration and the inaccessibility of the Board of Governors. In order to have a stronger voice for change, I decided to run for the Board of Governors.

I came to George Brown College having worked 19 years as an architectural technologist. During my tenure I have made it my business never to lose contact with industry in order to stay abreast of current technology.

Education in Canada is in a state of crisis. Reform is necessary throughout the system. We at George Brown have a great opportunity to effect change, with a new President soon to be appointed.

What do I offer?

- Vigorous promotion of excellence in curriculum planning.
- Promotion of closer liaison with industry, business and technology in order to anticipate change and develop programs reflecting the changing workplace.
- Promotion of better lines of communication between the college administration and the staff and students to counter the atmosphere of alienation and frustration that exists at present.

If elected, I will bring my skills and energy to the task of revitalizing communications between the administration and the teaching staff, and for the pursuit of excellence and the creation of innovative programming to ensure the future of George Brown College as a leader in education for years to come.

Amy Thornton
17 years teaching
Access Division

Voting day for representation on the Board of Governors is Dec. 6, 1990. I believe that by participation, in ways such as voting, we give importance to issues.

The Board of Governors - what do they have to do with us as faculty members? In fact, they are our employers and have final decision making on all college matters. I know, however, that I personally had never heard of the Board of Governors from the time I joined George Brown College as a faculty member in the Deaf and Hard of Hearing department in 1973, until I started attending the monthly Board meetings on a regular basis, as an observer, in 1984. The by-law changes which allowed the election of internal Board members to the Board, occurred three years ago. Eric Lord retired in mid-term and I was elected to complete his term. In 1990, the internal Board members were given the right to vote at Board meetings.

Recently, I chaired both the Board of Governors Retreat planning sub-committee and the retreat itself. The sub-committee was responsible for the inclusion of elected representatives from the College Council and the union locals at the retreat.

The interaction between the external Board members and internal staff has resulted in some very definitive plans.

I believe I have played a significant role in making the Board of Governors aware of faculty issues, on occasion, perhaps more than was wanted by the Board. As president of our union local (556), I sit on a wide variety of college and union committees, which places me in a unique position to be aware of faculty issues and resource individuals to assist me.

I urge you to vote Dec. 6, and to mark your ballot for Amy Thornton.

Student Candidates

Claude Lindsay
Business Accounting student
Second year

Timothy Mitchell
Business student
Third year

Edward Smith
Human Services Counselling student
First year

When I asked many of my peers if they knew who made the major decisions within George Brown College, I often received "No", or, "The President" as the answer. Asked if they knew anything about the Board of Governors, they replied in turn, "The Board of who?"

I am amazed at the number of students who are clued out about the amount of influence they have on their environment. This not only includes their physical and working environment, but also the environment within the school they attend. This is not from a lack of interest but a lack of information.

To be unaware that, as students, we have input on the way George Brown College functions, is to be misinformed. This is the basis on which I have chosen to run for student representative on the ruling body of George Brown College.

As your representative, I believe that all students have the right to be informed about the happenings of your school, especially since you are the ones affected by them.

Hello! My name is Tim Mitchell. I am in my third year at George Brown College. When I saw the sign asking for nominations for the student representative on the Board of Governors, I realized it was something I had to do.

The reasons are simple. The college has not paid attention to what the students really want or need. We need a very strong voice on the B of G and I am the one to fill that need.

I have been an executive on the student council at St. James for the past two years, presently as social director. While on council I have heard a great number of student concerns and I feel that I can effectively use the student position on the Board of Governors to make some very much needed changes at George Brown.

I am not a radical person looking to make trouble, but rather a level-headed person who knows what the student issues are. I will do all that I can to make sure that the real student issues are addressed and I can guarantee that. When you vote on Dec. 6, remember that Tim Mitchell is the right choice for you.

I am concerned about several aspects of student life at George Brown. A strong student voice is needed on the Board of Governors to lobby government for more funding.

More work needs to be done in our own financial assistance offices, which are too rigid in dealing with special student needs. The college used to administer a special fund and dropped it because the fund was poorly administered.

As a student in human services counselling — a training program for counselling in the field of addictions, mental health, and criminal justice — I am concerned about the quality of life for students. On some campuses, there is no supervised quiet area for students to go during the day. Also, existing facilities on our campuses are not being used to their greatest potential and there are issues regarding security and proper ventilation, with this problem being greater on some campuses than others.

There are several issues regarding the quality of instruction, and I feel there is a need to ask for training programs to help instructors improve their skills.

No matter what, I will be dedicated to work on behalf of all students.

New Minister

responses to the Vision 2000 Report. And I've certainly had some heavy briefings to date on the issues in the Report; and we've talked in the Ministry about some directions we might take following that.... I think I've already signalled that I'm especially interested in seeing the Council on Evaluation and Standards for the system in place and up and running quite quickly, because I think that is going to be one of the keys to linking the college system with the university system in particular.

The Gandz Report? That's been sitting there for quite a while now, unfortunately, and I know there's still some debate inside the system around local bargaining as against provincial bargaining... or combined arrangement.... We are obviously going to have to resolve that one, and I would hope to before another round of negotiations.

CCN: What do you see as the major weaknesses of the college system right now?

Allen: Perhaps, two. One is something I referred to a few moments ago. I think there is some lack of consistency in standards in terms of what's offered across the system.... I'm not meaning, by that, that every curriculum has to offer exactly the same thing. No, I think there has to be lots of variety. But I think there has to be some clear recognition of a level of accomplishment that's fairly common in the system, because unless you do that, it's going to be difficult for students to move back and forth within it, or to move laterally to other educational systems.... I think that's critical to the success of students in the kind of multi-dimensional system that we're developing.

CCN: How badly will your ministry be affected by the deficit and the current financial concerns of the government?

Allen: Well, it will be this badly affected: That it will be impossible for me to pull the colleges out of the trough of underfunding in which they exist vis-a-vis the other main elements of Ontario's educational system. The funding per student is in fact the lowest in the college system - in other words, (compared to) secondary for example, or university on the other hand. I don't think that's right. I doubt that I'm going to have the financial clout available this year to put it up where it should be.

Names in the News

George Brown's wine experts are sipping their way to success, according to the latest news from the grapevine.

Chef teacher Jacques Marie was president of the jury at the Canadian Sommelier Championships in September at the Sutton Place Hotel. He is the co-ordinator of the College's Sommelier (wine steward) program. Sommelier program advisory committee Chairperson Hector Vergara was declared Canadian Sommelier of the Year at the same event. Vergara is Sommelier at the Sutton Place Hotel.

One of the five runners-up in the competition was Scott Montgomery, a graduate of the College's Sommelier program and a teacher of the advanced wine appreciation course at George Brown.

George Brown palates also tasted wine across the Atlantic. Jacques Marie and Hector Vergara were in France in mid-November for the selection of the world championship sommelier at the International Competition for Best Sommelier in French Wines and Spirits. Sixteen countries were represented at the event. Vergara tasted for Canada and Marie was a jury member.

"It was tremendously interesting," said Marie. "It is an extremely tough competition." He said the competition involves not only wine tasting, but also knowing how to match food with wine, writing theoretical papers, and knowing the laws of wine demarcation.

School of Technology teacher and George Brown graduate Jenny Ono has been given an Award of Merit by the Society of Manufacturing Engineers. She helped found a student chapter of the Society while studying at the College. Ono, who now teaches mechanical drafting, has served as a graduate representative on the Board of Governors and was involved with organizing the College's 20th anniversary celebrations.

School of Business graduate James D'Adamo is now an account representative on the high fashion Details Magazine in New York. He joined the Conde Nast empire after working in Toronto for a magazine.

Former George Brown dance student Kiki Moritsugu has gone from the basement of St. James to Broadway. She made her New York debut this month in the stage production of James Clavell's Shogun. The 24-year-old, who is the daughter of Casa Loma English teacher Jo Hutchings, plays the maid to the female lead. Moritsugu comes by her talent honestly. Her mother was a television and stage actress for over 20 years. Hutchings attended the premiere of Shogun and admitted that, while she knew of her daughter's dancing prowess, she was surprised to see her wield a sword. "On opening night, I gasped audibly at Kiki's spectacular and rather gruesome death at the hands of the Ninjas," says Hutchings.

Show business started for Moritsugu at George Brown. Her mother enrolled her in the School of Dance when she was only nine, where she continued her dance training for 10 years, finishing with a year in the full-time diploma program in 1985. Moritsugu has performed in television commercials, industrial shows, and joined the cast of the touring company of Cats in 1988.
